HEIDEGGER'S INTERPRETATION OF CHRISTIAN RELIGIOSITY IN ST. PAUL'S EPISTLES TO THE THESSALONIANS

Heidegger tried to explain the factual expirience of the Christian religious life via the methodical process of phenomenological description. As a proper paradigm for this kind of explication, he started interpreting the Epistles of St. Paul to the Thessalonians which, according to his belief, were the most concise in depicting the life of a Christian believer as seen against the background of accentuated insecurity, existential incertitude, fears, hopes, etc.
